COUNTY PASSES $650 QUOTA SET FOR RED CROSS

Additional Money Expected to Be Received from Two More Benefits

THEATRE PROVIDES $68

Numerous Individual Gifts Add to Fund for Flood District Relief

Pickaway-co Red Cross is over the top in its $650 drive for flood relief. Carl C. Leist, county chairman, made the announcement Thursday noon.

Contributions received Thursday amounted to more than $100. Numerous township chairmen have not fully completed reports. In addition two benefit events are planned next week. The C. A. C. will stage a boxing show Monday at 8 p. m. and residents of Jackson-twp will hold a program in the school Tuesday at the same hour.

Summit Provide $68

Four benefit shows presented in the Cliftona theater, Wednesday afternoon and evening, added $68 to the campaign fund. Church services and several other events caused a drop in attendance at the theatre. Use of the theatre was donated by the management and all money collected was given the Red Cross.

Contributions announced Thursday are: Eagles lodge $10, Washington-twp school $10, Mrs. Florence Wise $1, Mrs. C. B. Wilkins $50 cents, Edwin and Loring Leist $2, Mrs. Roy Rittinger $1, Muhlenberg-twp school $5.25, Mrs. John W. Eshelman $2, Mrs. Sallie Van Winkle $1, and $5 was given by a resident whose name was withheld.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(UP)—The American Red Cross reported today that contributions of $2,039,214 had been received in its campaign for $3,000,000 to aid flood sufferers.

At the same time it announced that the number of families being aided was now in excess of 100,000. The largest increase was in the Pittsburgh area.

COUNTY WOMAN DIES

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. in the Hebron M. E. church for Nancy B. Vanscoy, who died Tuesday at her home in Monroe-twp. Rev. Harmon of Derby will officiate.

QUINTUPLETS REPLACE FALLS AS ATTRACTION

TORONTO, Ont., March 26.—(UP)—The Dionne quintuplets slowly are displacing Niagara Falls as a tourist attraction. W. L. Houck, member of the Ontario legislature for Niagara Falls, claims.

Houck told the legislature tourists, who formerly spent several days at the falls, now pause only a few minutes. He said they took a quick look at the scenic grandeur then leave for Callender and the quins.

NEW JAPANESE, SOVIET BORDER FIGHT REPORTED

Number of Soldiers Killed; Ambassador at Tokyo Ordered to Protest

MOSCOW, March 26.—(UP)—An undetermined number of Japanese soldiers were killed and wounded in two clashes in Russian territory on the Manchukuo frontier, an official dispatch from Khabarovsk, Siberia, asserted today.

Seven Japanese soldiers crossed the frontier yesterday morning near Hunchun, Manchukuo, southwest of Vladivostok, Siberia, the dispatch said, penetrated 800 feet into Russian territory and fired on five Russian frontier guards. The Japanese were forced to retreat after a half hour skirmish, leaving two dead, the dispatch said.

Yesterday afternoon, the dispatch continued, 50 Japanese with machine guns returned to the spot and fired on Russian guards, but again were compelled to retreat after a fight, this one of several hours' duration. The Japanese, it was said, left a number of dead and wounded.

Russian Ambassador Constantine Yurenev at Tokyo was instructed to protest immediately.

HILDEBURN JONES IS GIVEN DIVORCE BY JUDGE RANKIN

Hildeburn Jones, former Circleville auto dealer, was granted a divorce from Florence R. Jones in common pleas court Thursday. A nine-page decision was filed by Judge H. M. Rankin of Washington C. H., who heard the action as a visiting judge.

Custody of the son, is given Mrs. Jones. Mr. Jones will be given reasonable rights of visitation. An allowance for support of the youth and a settlement of property rights will be made. Judge Rankin plans to confer further with counsel on these two matters.

Mr. Jones is employed on a CCC position in southern Ohio.

CIRCLE AT MAIN CORNER IN DOUBT AS WORK MOVES

If a circle is to be installed in white bricks at Court and Main-sts bricks now being placed by WPA employees will have to be removed, because no further delay in the work is contemplated.

Vattier Courtwright, WPA engineer, declared Thursday that the main intersection will be paved with regular bricks. "If," he said, "some design is worked out later it will be possible to remove enough bricks to create it."

Workmen completed bricking the Court and Franklin-sts corner Wednesday afternoon. They expect to finish half of the block between Franklin and Main-sts Thursday. The base of the corner at Court and Main-sts was being prepared by advance workers Thursday in preparation for actual paving.

50 FEEDERS ON TOUR

Fifty Pickaway-co cattle feeders took part in the annual tour Thursday. Four stops were on the schedule.

CITIES IN RIVER VALLEY FEARING NEW HIGH WATER

Wheeling and Marietta Cease Rehabilitation Work; Families Leave

COVINGTON QUARANTINED

Scioto Falling After Threatening to Cover Several County Roads

By United Press WHEELING, W. VA., MARIETTA, O., and other communities of the upper Ohio valley were menaced by a new flood crest today, while cities of the lower valley anticipated a lowered river level.

Hundreds of refugees from last week's devastating floods fled their homes again in the Wheeling district where the river, already above flood stage, was rising steadily.

The Monongahela and Allegheny rivers were receding at Pittsburgh, ending, for the time, a new flood threat there.

Cleaning-Up Halted

The rising Ohio halted rehabilitation work in the upper valley. Marietta, O., reported the Ohio river rising there at the rate of less than an inch an hour. It stood at 36.6 feet, six-tenths of a foot over flood stage and was expected to rise at least three feet more. No serious damage was expected unless further rains swell the Mus-

CITY MAY VOTE ON POWER RATE

Chillicothe Discusses Council Vote; Ford May Act

CHILLICOTHE, March 26.—Chillicothe voters may have a chance to express themselves through a referendum petition on the light rate ordinance passed by council.

The referendum depends largely on action taken by Mayor James Ford. If he vetoes the ordinance, presented by the Southern Ohio Electric Co., there is a possibility they will not be passed over his veto. If the ordinance passes the veto a group of citizens plan to spring into action.

Mayor Ford expresses the opinion the legislation had been "railroaded" through council and the passage was a "bungled mess."

STATE HIGHWAY EMPLOYEES WORK 35 - HOUR WEEK

COLUMBUS, March 26.—(UP)—A 17 per cent salary increase was granted today to 4,000 employees of the state highway department by Director John Jaster, Jr. The increase will be accomplished by putting the 4,000 employees on a 35-hour week instead of a 30-hour week. Hourly pay of highway workers is limited to 50 cents by law. The increase will not affect departmental executives.

It was understood the employees might be put on a 40-hour week later.

25 Women Keep Glove Factory Idle

Clubs Are Weapons as Pickets Menace 100 in Group Seeking Work

COSHOCOTON, March 26.—(UP)—Twenty-five striking women, armed with clubs, today held the Indianapolis Glove Co. plant idle for the second day. In their dispute over a 20 per cent wage reduction.

Non-strikers marched to the plant at 7 a. m. to return to their jobs but made no attempt to break the picket lines as they had threatened.

Fifty miners and hod carriers, members of sympathetic unions, stood behind the women in their picket line. They were ready to support the girls if the 100 non-strikers attempted to force their way into the factory.

"Get ready girls! Here they come," one of the pickets yelled as the non-striking workers, most of them members of the company union, marched down the street in front of the plant.

"Better be careful," another feminine picket yelled, "or we'll mess your hair up."

No police were near the scene. There were 10 or 12 men, employees of the plant, in the non-strikers' ranks.

NEW STORM HITS WESTERN AREA

Dust Obscures Sun at Topeka; Sweeps Eastward

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 26.—(UP)—A severe dust storm swirled over south central Kansas and the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles today and was moving northeastward at a swift pace.

Weather observers predicted it would be one of the worst dust storms this year.

At Topeka, Kans., huge dust clouds partially obscured the sun. Visibility was limited to one mile.

At Wichita the brown fog completely enveloped the city and reduced visibility to half a mile.

At Anthony, Kans., airplane pilots reported zero ceiling and zero visibility. The dust clouds were so thick that motor car headlights were turned on and residents used handkerchiefs as breathing masks.

A visibility of one-fourth mile was reported at Waynoka, Okla., with the storm rapidly becoming worse. At Amarillo, Tex., reported one-fifth mile visibility.

The storm arrived in Kansas City at 10 a. m. and moved northeast. Weather observers predicted it will reach into Iowa and Illinois by tonight and dissipate itself before morning.

At the western edge of Kansas light snow flurries mixed with a thin cloud of dust giving several communities literally a mud bath.

PRISONER IS VIEWED

Sheriff Charles Radcliff, acting Police Chief Alva Shasteen, and Dudley Courtwright drove to London Thursday to check reports that a man recently returned to the prison farm had passed a number of bad checks in this vicinity.

Townsend Row?

HINTS of dissension in the ranks of the Townsend old age pension organization were given credence when Robert E. Clements, secretary and co-founder with Dr. Francis E. Townsend of the group, resigned on the eve of the special house investigation of the pension plan at which Clements was scheduled as the first witness. According to Clements, who was subpoenaed by the investigation committee, he resigned because he was dissatisfied with Dr. Townsend's political maneuvering.

ANNUAL COUNTY EVENT APRIL 16

Warren in Charge of Arrangements for Festival

Pickaway-co schools will hold their oratorical contest in Pickaway-twp school, Thursday, April 16, with M. C. Warren, superintendent, in charge of arrangements.

One change has been made in rules governing the contest. Pupils will not be required to give original orations and may choose any subject they desire. In previous contests original orations were required and copies were filed with school officials.

Thomas Alkire, Pickaway-twp, won the 1935 event held in Williamsport.

Each school will enter one contestant and the speaking order will be as follows: Pickaway, Ashville, Scioto, Washington, Monroe, New Holland, Deercreek, Muhlenberg, Darby, Saltcreek, Walnut, Jackson, and Perry.

GREENO PLAYS IN CEMENT, SLEEPS IN PRISON CELL

Archie Greeno, 41, Stoutsville, wanted to play in the cement being poured on the Court-st reconstruction project Wednesday afternoon.

He smeared it over his arms and wrapped one hand up as though it were injured. Someone suggested he visit the mayor. Archie went to city hall.

He spent the night in jail for intoxication, and he was released Thursday morning under orders of Mayor Graham.

FOUNDER'S AIDE, 'BRAINS' OF AGE IDEA, IS QUIZZED

Resigned Secretary Tells House Committee His Knowledge Limited

CONFERENCE RELATED

Information Concerning Tax Learned from Reading, He Declares

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(UP)—Robert E. Clements, resigned national secretary of the "business brains" of the Townsend old age pension organization, told a congressional committee today that he had never signed a "fundamental study of economic conditions in connection with the old age pension plan."

"Do you know the difference between economy and frugality?" asked a committee member. "I don't know," Clements replied.

Seek "Smile Story" The resigned secretary, who was first witness at a public hearing on the Townsend old age pension movement, said he had read the "Smile Story" in the "Inside Story" of Townsend and other old age pensioners.

Learning of the committee's chasing the "Smile Story," said Clements, he made a detailed study of Townsend's plan and of the economists and statisticians who had made the plan. He added that he had read the plan to produce and to consume, but admitted that he had never studied any textbooks on economics or taxation before the Townsend plan's conception.

He had followed statistics and government reports closely and had made a "diligent search" for data on transaction taxes, he said, but only after the plan's inception. He said he never attended college.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend first approached him about the plan in October and November, 1932. "I was in the real estate business at Long Beach," he said. "My father was then practically retired."

"It was an office about half

$19,000 DAMAGE SUIT RESULT OF CRASH DISMISSED

The $19,000 damage action of William Blackford Canter, Wellston, against Avery Eichinger, Columbus, formerly of Circleville, was dismissed in common pleas court Thursday morning at the cost of the defendant.

Mr. Canter was the driver of a truck involved in an auto collision Aug. 29, 1933, at Routes 56 and 159, eight miles southeast of Circleville.

Rev. and Mrs. Charles H. Eichinger and Mrs. Henry Eichinger, daughter-in-law, were killed in the collision, and Avery Eichinger, driver of the car, was injured. The Rev. Mr. Eichinger was pastor of the First M. E. church.

The plaintiff sued for injuries sustained in the crash.

The Camden Ruby Murder, Thrilling Serial Story, Starts in Today's Herald

CHAPTER 1. MARGALO'S performance was superb, of course. I had known it would be, for she has a fashion of accepting her roles seriously. Even now, taking her last curtain call, she still was Maggie Shand, more than a little embarrassed by the applause. There was a shy half smile on her lips as her fingers touched the gold watch pinned to the bosom of her plain black dress.

I sat for a moment or two after the curtain finally went down, while the audience poured into the aisles. There was no need of hurrying. It would take Margalo at least half an hour to change. She loathed being hurried after a performance. We were doing nothing special except dining. Where I did not know. Margalo would have to decide that. The hazards I once had known, the places I had liked in the old days probably would be gone now. A long time since I had been in New York. A large city changes rapidly, and it had been 10 years on us.

The way she had looked at me—I knew she had changed, too.

"You're getting gray, Gary," she had said. I was, but I had never had my few white hairs mentioned so frankly before. Yes I was getting gray. But 37 is entirely too young an age to begin feeling old. Margalo was 37, too. Probably now she didn't admit to that age, but she was, nevertheless. I knew. Probably her press agent gave out that Miss Younger was not a day over 30. She looked 30, I thought. Easily that. And when a woman looks 30 these days when no woman claims more than 25 hoary years, she is careless. It was unlike Margalo to be careless.

Margalo and I were getting toward middle age. I sighed, as I had a right to do, although I know very well there is no such thing as age.

Once, long ago, very long ago it seems now, because the span of 15 years is not so tedious in our memories as older years, she and I had been in love. Young love, it lasted only a summer, and then we both came to our senses. I, of course, but I mean Margalo. The thought, I remember, that made the discovery that I was recovering, so completely when I think of it now, I seem to see us both smiling at each other.

COUNTY PASSES $650 QUOTA SET FOR RED CROSS

Additional Money Expected to Be Received from Two More Benefits

THEATRE PROVIDES $68

Numerous Individual Gifts Add to Fund for Flood District Relief

Pickaway-co Red Cross is over the top in its $650 drive for flood relief. Carl C. Leist, county chairman, made the announcement Thursday noon.

Contributions received Thursday amounted to more than $100. Numerous township chairmen have not fully completed reports. In addition two benefit events are planned next week. The C. A. C. will stage a boxing show Monday at 8 p. m. and residents of Jackson-twp will hold a program in the school Tuesday at the same hour.

Shows Provide $68

Four benefit shows presented in the Cliftona theater, Wednesday afternoon and evening, added $68 to the campaign fund. Church services and several other events caused a drop in attendance at the theatre. Use of the theater was donated by the management and all money collected was given the Red Cross.

Contributions announced Thursday are: Eagles lodge $10, Washington-twp school $10, Mrs. Florence Wise $1, Mrs. C. B. Wilkins 50 cents, Edwin and Loring Leist $2, Mrs. Roy Rittinger $1, Muhlenberg-twp school $5.25, Mrs. John W. Eshelman $2, Mrs. Sallie Van Winkle $1, and $5 was given by a resident whose name was withheld.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(UP)—The American Red Cross reported today that contributions of $2,039,214 had been received in its campaign for $3,000,000 to aid flood sufferers.

At the same time it announced that the number of families being aided was now in excess of 100,000. The largest increase was in the Pittsburgh area.

Contributions to the fund were divided as follows: Eastern states, $1,598,402; mid-western, $324,000; Pacific coast, $63,200; insular, $6,000; foreign, $112; direct to headquarters, $47,500.

25 Women Keep Glove Factory Idle

Clubs Are Weapons as Pickets Menace 100 in Group Seeking Work

COSHOCOTON, March 26.—(UP)—Twenty-five striking women, armed with clubs, today held the Indianapolis Glove Co. plant idle for the second day. In their dispute over a 20 per cent wage reduction.

Non-strikers marched to the plant at 7 a. m. to return to their jobs but made no attempt to break the picket lines as they had threatened.

Fifty miners and hod carriers, members of sympathetic unions, stood behind the women in their picket line. They were ready to support the girls if the 100 non-strikers attempted to force their way into the factory.

"Get ready girls! Here they come," one of the pickets yelled as the non-strikers workers, most of them members of the company union, marched down the street in front of the plant.

"Better be careful," another feminine picket yelled, "or we'll muss your hair up."

No police were near the scene. There were 10 or 12 men, employees of the plant, in the non-strikers' ranks.

NEW STORM HITS WESTERN AREA

Dust Obscures Sun at Topeka; Sweeps Eastward

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 26.—(UP)—A severe dust storm swirled over south central Kansas and the Texas and Oklahoma panhandles today and was moving northeastward at a swift pace.

Weather observers predicted it would be one of the worst dust storms this year.

At Topeka, Kans., huge dust clouds partially obscured the sun. Visibility was limited to one mile. At Wichita the brown fog completely enveloped the city and reduced visibility to half a mile.

At Anthony, Kans., airplane pilots reported zero ceiling and zero visibility. The dust clouds were so thick that motor car headlights were turned on and residents used handkerchiefs as breathing masks.

A visibility of one-fourth mile was reported at Waynoka, Okla., with the storm rapidly becoming worse. At Amarillo, Tex., the visibility was 100 feet and the ceiling zero. Canadian, Tex., reported one-fifth mile visibility.

The storm arrived in Kansas City at 10 a. m. and moved northeast. Weather observers predicted it will reach into Iowa and Illinois by tonight and dissipate itself before morning.

At the western edge of Kansas, light snow flurries mixed with a thin cloud of dust giving several communities literally a mud bath.

Townsend Row?

HINTS of dissension in the ranks of the Townsend old age pension organization were given credence when Robert E. Clements, secretary and co-founder with Dr. Francis E. Townsend of the group, resigned on the eve of the special house investigation of the pension plan at which Clements was scheduled as the first witness. According to Clements, who was subpoenaed by the investigation committee, he resigned because he was dissatisfied with Dr. Townsend's political maneuvering.

ANNUAL COUNTY EVENT APRIL 16

Warren in Charge of Arrangements for Festival

Pickaway-co schools will hold their oratorical contest in Pickaway-twp school, Thursday, April 16, with M. C. Warren, superintendent, in charge of arrangements.

One change has been made in rules governing the contest. Pupils will not be required to give original orations and may choose any subject they desire. In previous contests original orations were required and copies were filed with school officials.

Thomas Alkire, Pickaway-twp, won the 1935 event held in Willamsport.

Each school will enter one contestant and the speaking order will be as follows: Pickaway, Ashville, Scioto, Washington, Monroe, New Holland, Deer Creek, Muhlenberg, Darby, Salt Creek, Walnut, Jackson, and Perry.

GREENO PLAYS IN CEMENT, SLEEPS IN PRISON CELL

Archie Greeno, 41, Stoutsville, wanted to play in the cement being poured on the Court-st reconstruction project Wednesday afternoon.

He smeared it over his arms and wrapped one hand up as though it were injured. Someone suggested he visit the mayor. Archie went to city hall.

He spent the night in jail for intoxication, and he was released Thursday morning under orders of Mayor Graham.

Information Concerning Tax Learned from Reading, He Declares

WASHINGTON, March 26.—(UP)—Robert E. Clements, resigned national secretary and "business brains" of the Townsend old age pension organization, told a congressional committee today that he had never made any "fundamental study of economics" in connection with the $200-a-month pension plan.

"Do you know the difference between economy and political economy?" asked Committee Counsel James R. Sullivan.

"I don't know that I do," Clements replied.

Seek "Inside Story"

The resigned secretary was the first witness at a politically-significant investigation into old age pension movements designed to reveal the "inside story" of the Townsend and other plans.

Leaning forward on the committee table and clasping his hands as he testified, Clements said that he had made a detailed study of the Townsend plan and of opinions of economists and other authorities.

He added that he had read treatises on the ability of the nation to produce and to consume, but admitted that he had never studied any textbooks on economics or taxation before the Townsend plan's conception.

He had followed statistics and government reports closely and had made "a diligent search" for data on transaction taxes, he said, but only after the plan's inception. He said he never attended college.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend first approached him about the plan in October and November, 1933.

"I was in the real estate business at Long Beach," he said. "My father was then practically retired."

$19,000 DAMAGE SUIT RESULT OF CRASH DISMISSED

The $19,000 damage action of William Blackford Canter, Wellston, against Avery Eichinger, Columbus, formerly of Circleville, was dismissed in common pleas court Thursday morning at the cost of the defendant.

Mr. Canter was the driver of a truck involved in an auto collision Aug. 29, 1933, at Routes 56 and 159, eight miles southeast of Circleville.

Rev. and Mrs. Charles H. Eichinger and Mrs. Henry Eichinger, daughter-in-law, were killed in the collision, and Avery Eichinger, driver of the car, was injured. The Rev. Mr. Eichinger was pastor of the First M. E. church.

The plaintiff sued for injuries sustained in the crash.

The Camden Ruby Murder, Thrilling Serial Story, Starts in Today's Herald

CHAPTER 1.

MARGALO'S performance was superb, of course. I had known it would be, for she has a fashion of accepting her roles seriously. Even now, taking her last curtain call, she still was Maggie Shand, more than a little embarrassed by the applause. There was a shy half smile on her lips as her fingers touched the gold watch pinned to the bosom of her plain black dress.

I sat for a moment or two after the curtain finally went down, while the audience poured into the aisles. There was no need of hurrying. It would take Margalo at least half an hour to change. She loathed being hurried after a performance. We were doing nothing special except dining. Where I did not know. Margalo would have to decide that. The haunts I once had known, the places I had liked in the old days probably would be gone now. A long time since I had been in

New York. A large city changes rapidly, and it had been 10 years.

Even Margalo was not the same. There was something more settled about her, more mature. A light gone from her eyes. Something more, too, something I couldn't fathom yet because we had had so short a time together at noon—my luncheon her breakfast.

Ten years since I had seen her. I had expected her to be the same. Queer, the tricks the years play on us. The way she had looked at me—I knew I had changed, too.

"You're getting gray, Gary," she had said. I was, but I had never had my few white hairs mentioned so frankly before. Yes I was getting gray. But 37 is entirely too young an age to begin feeling old. Margalo was 37, too. Probably now she didn't admit to that age, but she was, nevertheless. I knew. Probably her press agent gave out that Miss Younger was not a day over 30. She looked 30, I thought. Easily that. And when a woman looks 30 these days when no woman claims more than 25 hoary years, she is careless. It was unlike Margalo to be careless.

Margalo and I were getting toward middle age. I sighed, as I had a right to do, although I know very well there is no such thing as age.

Once, long ago, very long ago it seems now, because the span of 15 years is not so tenuous in our memories as older years, she and I had been in love. Young love. It lasted only a summer, and then we both came to our senses. I say both, but I mean Margalo first. The thought, I remember, that she made the discovery first, rather stung at the time. Later I entirely recovered, so completely that when I think of our realization now, it seems perfectly evident we both decided at once that we all Tales

A colored man employed on the Court-street work was attracting a great deal of attention from the on-lookers, not so much by his precise manner as by his appearance. He was wearing a heavy overcoat, and his feet were encased in an enormous pair of 4-buckle arctic. The buckles were not fastened so the tops gaped widely and flopped loudly at each step. He was assigned the task of pouring hot tar into the cracks between the bricks.

His can ran dry and he called for more tar. The attendant drew a bucket full of the boiling tar and hurried to comply with his request. Just as he raised the bucket to pour the tar broke and the tar was spilled into one of his boots.

His face went blank, then there was a look of pain, and as the other workers rushed to his aid, a broad smile covered his face. He waved them away saying: "Don't you all touch me. That's the first time that foot's been warm this winter. Say boss, would you be kind enough to pour a bucket of tar in my other foot?"

kingdom, a tributary which enters the Ohio here.

The river was stationary at Huntington, W. Va., but was expected to start rising tonight. It was at 55 feet, five feet over flood stage, today.

Intense suffering from the flood crest that wrecked many communities of the upper valley last week, continued in the vicinity of Cincinnati. Covington, Ky., was under an iron quarantine against spinal meningitis which was reported to have caused two deaths.

Residents of Indiana communities prepared for the Ohio crest when it reaches them.

Cold weather reduced the possibility of extensive damage from swollen streams in Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Mississippi Higher

The Mississippi was rising in Minnesota but officials said there was no "real danger."

After reaching a peak of 15 1/2 feet Wednesday night, the Scioto river started a gradual drop and was 14 1/2 feet at 9 a. m. Thursday morning.

Highway employees kept a close watch on Route 22 west of the bridge Wednesday night but the stream did not inundate the highway. Dr. H. R. Clark, Circleville weatherman, reported the stream was gradually falling. There is little danger of another sudden rise, he said.

The temperature took a 23-degree drop Wednesday night. At 8 a. m. Thursday the mercury was resting at 40 degrees.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved, when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking acids and wastes out of the blood. A healthy person should pass about 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, waste stays in the body and may become poisonous. It may start nagging backaches, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't let it lay you up.

Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—used successfully for millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills.

Discussed in 1933

He said Townsend had been "in" on a midway city real estate venture in which he participated but said they were not associated in 1933.

There was much talk and "bandying about" of the idea of old age pensions between himself and Townsend between the fall of 1933 and Jan. 1934, when the plan was incorporated, he said.

GENERAL PRICE UP

NEW YORK, March 26.—(UP)—A few outstanding issues gave the stock market an appearance of strength today, although most stocks moved narrowly in dull trading. General Motors Corporation, the feature, reached a new high since 1929 at 68 up a point. Other automobile issues followed with advances of fractions to a point.

It is barely possible that some low form of life exists on Mars, an astronomer admits. A race of Hitlers and Mussolinis, perhaps.

REMEMBER WHEN?

The Methodist Episcopal church was dedicated.

Dedication services were held on May 15, 1910 while Rev. D. H. Jemison was pastor. Services were held through the day, and during the week numerous meetings were conducted in the new church. The cornerstone of the building was laid May 10, 1909, and one year was required to complete the building. Cost of the church, including furnishing, was exactly $41,811.05.

"ABDUCTORS" BOND $1

NEW YORK, March 26.—(UP)—Jacob Smith, 21, won the lowest bail on record in a kidnaping case yesterday—$1. Mrs. Antoinette Wildman accused him of kidnaping her 15-year-old niece, Dorothea Wildman. Magistrate Sylvester Sabatino adjourned a hearing to May 1 and set the unique bail when Smith, blushing, introduced his "victim" as Mrs. Jacob Smith. They hadn't intended to tell the bride's aunt, they said, until Mrs. Smith became 16 on Saturday.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are one of Nature's chief ways of taking acids and wastes out of the blood. A healthy person should pass about 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste matter.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, waste stays in the body and may become poisonous. It may start nagging backaches, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Don't let it lay you up.

Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills—used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 miles of kidney tubes. Get Doan's Pills.

DEVIL'S FOOD CAKE

One-half cupful butter

Two eggs

One-half cupful boiling water

Two and one-half cupful flour

One teaspoonful soda

Two cupful brown sugar

Two squares unsweetened chocolate

Three-fourths cupful sour milk

One teaspoonful salt

Cream butter thoroughly and gradually add the sugar which has been rolled to remove lumps. Beat in eggs and add chocolate dissolved in boiling water and sour milk. Mix well. Add flour, salt and soda sifted together. Bake in layers for twenty minutes at 350 degrees.

BOY, 11, KILLED IN PLUNGE FROM OKLAHOMA JAIL

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 26.—(UP)—The death of 11-year-old Johnny Baker in an attempt to escape from the Payne-co jail at Stillwater brought threats today of a searching investigation into methods of handling juvenile delinquents.

Mrs. Mabel Bassett, state commissioner of charities and corrections, returned here from a trip to Stillwater to investigate the case. She said she was going to "have a talk" with the sheriff and judge of Payne-co.

Johnny plunged four stories to death on the pavement yesterday. He had fashioned a crude rope of bedding and clothing. It broke as he started the descent. His crushed body was found by passers-by.

SOUTHERN AREA ACTING TO HALT DISEASE SPREAD

Hartung Declares Great Precautions Needed to Combat Typhoid Fears

COLUMBUS, March 26.—(UP)—Dr. W. H. Hartung, state director of health, today looked for a disease crisis to develop in flood-stricken southern Ohio sometime next week.

The health director said that receding waters should deposit disease and that only the greatest of sanitary precautions would prevent development of typhoid fever. The water is certain to carry disease laden filth and deposit it in water sources, he said.

Dr. Hartung said that all precautionary steps had been taken, and in most instances river area residents, familiar with the possibilities of extended sickness from floods, had guarded themselves carefully. Rigid self-imposed regulations prevented the people from drinking from doubtful water supplies, he said, and even when water was believed to be pure, boiling was followed.

It was said today that the state department of health had sent 23,000 units of typhoid vaccine into the area to augment existing supplies and that thousands of persons had taken advantage of the extensive immunization programs carried forward in all flood areas.

The director expressed belief that the precautions would produce results by keeping typhoid to a minimum.

Greatest fear was expressed for persons who were forced to live in the damp areas without heat, that they would develop pneumonia.

Usually typhoid does not develop for a week or 10 days after the germs have been taken into the system, Dr. Hartung pointed out.

CAMDEN RUBY MURDER

There had been also a passionate promise that I would write a play for Margalo. This, however, had never been fulfilled. My forte was not the theater.

"Maughan!" A voice at my elbow startled me from my reverie. I looked up.

"Van Every! Been a long time since I saw you." We shook hands cordially.

"Last person in the world I thought I'd ever run into in New York," he said with a smile. "Thought you never came back here."

"Business." Then I remembered that only this morning when I had glanced through the papers, I had seen Van Every mentioned somewhat prominently. The Dispatch had had a long story about a famous ruby he had purchased for some fabulous price. Seventy thousand dollars, and, according to the paper, the highest price ever paid for a single ruby.

"Hear you've been doing some high financing in jewels," I jibed. Indeed, I had read the story in its entirety because I knew Van Every, and knew his love for gems.

"Yes. Come up to my house and I'll show it to you," he invited. He knew, also, my interest in the subject. In Florence where we had met some years before (he had a villa one winter), I had seen the Khonivar diamond, one of the finest in the world. Before that jewel had been merely baubles to me, but after seeing that stone I found myself with a tremendous interest in jewels. I always attributed this to Van Every. Not that I bought any.

"When?" I asked.

"Now, if you like."

"I'm sorry, but I'm just going around to the stage door to get Miss Younger—afraid I can't quite make it tonight."

"Bring her if you like."

Surely Margalo would be interested in seeing the ruby.

"I'm putting it in my safety deposit vault tomorrow."

"Then I'll have to come tonight, eh?"

If you want to see it, Maughan, I suggested he accompany me back stage. He assented, adding that he had enjoyed Margalo's performance and should like to meet her.

Margalo was slipping into a heavy mink coat when we reached her dressing room. She nodded politely when I introduced Van Every, but her face reflected immediate interest when she learned he was the owner of the Camden ruby, and that she was invited to see it this evening. As she was hungry, we proceeded to go to a small restaurant that was near the theater, the three of us.

"You don't mean to say, Mr. Van Every, that you're left your ruby at home—unguarded?" she asked.

He laughed, a short quick laugh that was characteristic of him.

"My dear Miss Younger—not unguarded. At the present time," he glanced at his wrist watch, "Soon is sitting near my safe, a gun on were quite the worst kind of fools. I without a sou, just out of college. She just starting on her career.

THE CAMDEN RUBY MURDER BY ADAM BLISS

If our love had been a little stronger, we probably would have braved it, but I think we both were a little frightened. Margalo had a right to be. I was a moony boy, living on dreams, and eating where I might.

We agreed later, when we came to earth and could talk about it sensibly, that what had happened was for the best. Since then we have been friends. Very good friends. We have written occasional notes, sent occasional presents. Ten years ago when I saw Margalo in Paris after the war, we mentioned not a word of love. Indeed, we both knew very well we didn't love each other. That had gone. It was of the past. We didn't try resurrect it.

Tonight we would talk and plan what we would do in the week I had in the city. Most of the time I knew I would spend with her. Indeed, Margalo's company would be all I would need. The business I had come over for would be quickly transacted. Then I would go back to Paris. Already I was homesick for my adopted home.

The trip over had been lonely, but I was used to loneliness. Then the city which I had known so well in my youth—I was a stranger now, looking on this city of my birth with almost alien eyes.

My business over I would hurry back. Margalo was like an oasis in a desert of loneliness.

I had not written that I was coming, so Margalo was surprised this morning. She had a right to be. My last note to her was from India months before. And at that time I had had no more idea of returning to New York, than of flying across the Atlantic.

Sometimes it seemed incomprehensible to me that she, who loved domesticity, had not married. It might be that she had changed more than I bargained. Now and then I had read rumors of her engagement to someone, only later to see these rumors denied.

Her name in lights outside. I had smiled when I saw it, flickering on and off on Broadway. Fifteen years ago I had coached her in a small part, her first real part. I could remember her lines still, repeat them letter perfect. The agony of that night was with me every time I thought of Margalo. She had been so intense about it, so anxious. Her big chance. And so it had proved. From that part she had gone steadily upward, until now these lights of hers had joined the great incandescent glow that was Broadway.

Margalo famous. I—well, I too, had had some recognition, although it was far from the fame she had. Once I had promised—that wild, glorious summer—to dedicate my first book to her. I had. In the 10 years that followed there had been others, inscribed to various people who meant little or nothing to me. In those days of my youth, there had been also a passionate promise that I would write a play for Margalo. This, however, had never been fulfilled. My forte was not the theater.

"Maughan!" A voice at my elbow startled me from my reverie. I looked up.

He laughed, a short quick laugh that was characteristic of him.

"My dear Miss Younger—not unguarded. At the present time," he glanced at his wrist watch, "Soon is sitting near my safe, a gun on his knees."

I remembered Soon. He was with Van Every in Florence, a silent Chinese, ageless, he seemed to me, his face burrowed with a thousand wrinkles, his hair as black as night. The more I had seen of Soon the more I appreciated what an admirable servant he was. Where Van Every had picked him up I didn't know. In the villa at Florence, his household consisted of Chinese servants, except for a French governess for his niece. It was strange there to see these yellow people. I had commented on it then, but Van Every said they traveled everywhere with him.

"PRODUCTION PEAK"—YES?

AN OHIO psychologist, Dr. Harvey C. Lehman, after much research has come to the conclusion that the age of 41 years is the high spot in production for writers and that poets are at their best around 35. Other specialists are in proportions, with the usual exceptions, of course.

Speaking of late bloomers in literature and the arts generally how about William De Morgan? Up to a gracious maturity of 65 years he was interested in decoration, with emphasis on pottery and tiles. Then he burst out with "Joseph Vance," not a negligible novel, and within five years had turned out three or four more that made prewar readers in England and America do a lot of new reading. There was Mark Twain, who did some of his best work after 50. Think of Hugo and Dickens! How about Joseph Conrad? He was a sea captain when he turned to writing fiction and not by any means in his first youth when he started; when he died at 67 he was famous, with a lot of good books to his credit, and still more in his inexhaustible mind. Was he at his peak? The general impression seems to be he was. Howells wrote his greatest novel at 48.

Ever hear of the painter Titian? He was along in his 90s when he took the count. He almost died with his brush and palette in his hand. Then there is our own Einstein, not exactly a chicken, nor was Nietzsche when he died. Production peak? That question is not reached by time table. It arrives when it arrives. TIME OF BIRD SINGING

"THE time of the singing of birds is come," wrote the scriptural author some 2500 years ago. Thus back in that dim dawn of antiquity, the voice of the little songster gave the same pleasure that it does today.

Countless men and women, disheartened by the harsh facts of life, have felt encouraged and sustained when they heard that rippling little melody pour forth from some ecstatic throat. It has seemed to them that the world must be essentially friendly, when it produces such sounds of loveliness out of every tree and bush.

WORLD AT A GLANCE

CONGRESS MAY pass a minor NRA bill this session. It is called "minor" merely because it does not enforce labor regulations on corporations. In other respects, it is more rigid than the NRA.

The bill in question is the Robinson-Patman measure to regulate price discounts.

Although this bill has no labor regulations in conjunction with it, Congress has another bill before it—being fought by the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Manufacturers' association—which would set up standards of hours and wages on all goods and materials entering into purchases with government money.

The Robinson-Patman bill is sponsored by small merchants and middlemen.

It would regulate, and in many instances prohibit, special terms for mass buyers, such as chain organizations. "Special terms" include quantity discounts, rebates, allowances for advertising and brokerage.

The bill also would try to prevent sales by chain organizations in certain communities at a loss, in order to drive out competitors, while maintaining higher prices in other communities.

Sponsors say the bill is intended to put everybody on an equal footing.

"BIG MONEY" IN TOWNSEND PLAN

WASHINGTON—Most ludicrous, also pathetic chapter in recent American political history is to be unfolded by the Congressional investigation of the Townsend old age pension movement.

The pathos of the story is the trust which thousands of elderly people throughout the country placed in the leaders of Townsendism.

The comedy is the manner in which these leaders cast their lot with men completely out of sympathy with the aged, solely for the purpose of promoting themselves.

Most amazing story is that of the secret Townsend deal with Huey Long, also the Townsendite strategy of stepping into the Kingfish's shoes as leader of a third party movement against Roosevelt.

SCENE I

The story opens last July in a hotel room in Washington.

Present were Huey himself; his secretary, Earl C. Christenberry, now secretary to his widow; Dr. Francis E. Townsend, brain-father of the plan; and R. E. Clements, suave little ex-realtor who is the real boss of the Townsend organization.

Huey and Clements did the talking, which was straight and to the point.

"We like your ideas, Senator," said Clements, "and the way you do business." "I think you people are going places," said Huey, "and I'm ready to trade with you. I want to tell you frankly I can't see your scheme of paying $200 a month pensions. I don't consider it practical."

"But," continued the Kingfish, "I am out to bust this guy Roosevelt and I'm willing to play ball with you folks if you will help me."

No agreement was reached at the meeting, but a friendly basis of negotiating was established and it was agreed to talk further.

There were no further talks. Six weeks later, Huey was dead.

CHICAGO CONVENTION

The scene shifts to Chicago. To quiet a mounting chorus of criticism within his organization, and also to stage a public show of strength, Clements decided to hold a national convention.

Inexperienced in this field, he contacted Earl Christenberry in New Orleans. With Huey dead, Christenberry was looking for a job. He agreed to manage the Townsend convention for $1,000 a week.

After Christenberry's arrival, Clements broached the idea of using the Townsend movement as the basis for a third party with Clements as the successor to Huey. Christenberry fell in with the proposal.

No word of this scheme reached the ears of the 7,000 old men and women who paid their own expenses to attend the convention. Before their eyes was dangled only the mirage of the $200 a month pension.

THE CAMDEN RUBY MURDER

COPYRIGHT—RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:
Dow Van Every, a collector of rare jewels, invites an acquaintance, Gary Maughan, and the latter's old friend, Margalo Younger, an actress, to his home to view the priceless Camden ruby.
(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 2

SO SOON, the Chinese servant, was sitting near the safe, a gun on his knees. Van Every had told Margalo and me. I smiled when I thought of him, for his face must be as enigmatical as ever, unsmiling, bland.

"I'd rather just soon with the ruby than myself," Van Every had noticed my smile. "I haven't had time to take it down yet. Well—I would have, only I wanted to see the thing, hold it. Realize it was mine. You know, Maughan."

I nodded. The recollection of the Khoniwar was fresh in my mind. He had played with it several days before he had put it in a deposit box with his collection. I had played with it, too. In fact we sat one whole evening at the villa, looking at the gem and speculating on its history. I was with Van Every when he measured it, weighed it, examined it.

The Camden ruby was not entirely unknown to me. I had read about it casually in newspapers, wild, unbelievable stories, fantastic things. Every large famous gem has a history, but the Camden ruby seemed to top them all. Van Every would know the truth about it, though. Stories of gems fascinated him almost as much as the jewels themselves.

"Rather a grim history back of it," Margalo suggested, as if she wanted Van Every to tell her about it. "I don't rather tell this in no place to tell it." He looked nervously about. The restaurant was crowded with after-theater people. Waiters were hurrying back and forth from the kitchen, chafing dishes on their trays. He hated restaurants. I knew that.

"I would have asked you to my place for something to eat, but soon—"

We left for Van Every's home in a taxi. Margalo was rather silent. She leaned back against the leather cushions, her eyes half closed.

"If you're too tired, we'll drop off at your apartment," I suggested.

"Please, Gary, let me see the ruby!" I declared. I think you're trying to get rid of me."

"We won't stay long," I promised.

"Queer how such a gem happens to be in New York," Margalo remarked.

"Not so queer, Miss Younger, when you know the story."

"Are you sure it's genuine?" Van Every was not offended. He often had been asked just such questions. When I first knew him, I had asked the same about the Khoniwar.

"Yes—quite sure. The stage is the finest I've ever seen. Beautiful. But you'll see it for yourself. The ruby Margalo was regarding him curiously as we alighted from the taxi in front of an old brownstone residence on West 44th street. The house was similar to most of the others in the block. A light-colored, slate-colored stone. Led from the sidewalk up some dozen feet to the front door, a big oak affair with a modern Yale lock imposed on the wood above the old-fashioned brass one.

I saw Van Every glance quickly at the windows of the second story before he placed his key in the lock. Although the first and third floor windows were dark, a faint light showed on the second. Soon was probably sitting, gun on his knees, guarding his master's treasure.

A switch which Van Every touched just inside the oak door flooded the hall with pale yellow light. It was small, as halls go, and to the right was a narrow stairway, flush with the wall on one side, while the other was flanked by a carved wood railing. Nothing but a chair and a table in the hall, well chosen they seemed to me, but I could not see clearly because of the dim light which came from an old temple lamp suspended from the ceiling.

We followed Van Every up the thickly carpeted stairs, passed a small Psyche settled languidly in a niche in the wall, and came to the upstairs hall. This was narrow, too. Van Every opened a door near the front and we entered a room, which was very evidently his library. A single light was burning on the table at the far end of the room, and out of the left, near my foot, a big brass embossed fire box. The couch, on which Margalo sat, the chair which I occupied, and another which I had no doubt Van Every would use were pulled up well to the hearth. Van Every, I knew from old, liked heat and had to have it.

The room stretched on behind us and beyond was a big room lined with bookcases which climbed flush to the ceiling. There were other pieces of furniture in the room, but I didn't notice them particularly then.

Van Every kicked a low footstool my way, and I tucked it under my feet. I thought I was comfortable before, but now I knew I was doubly comfortable. The chair was pure down, I decided, and hit my back at the exact spot where it should.

The couch Margalo was sitting on was a companion piece, although the back was lower.

"Now, I'll get the ruby," Van Every announced. Margalo's eyes opened and followed him as he stepped in front of us with a murmured apology and swung the brass fire box aside. So that was where his safe was! I had assumed it must be at the far end of the room where Soon had been sitting, the gun on his lap. Under the box was a small mat which our host lifted. Then I saw him, stooping beside me, twist a knob, which the firelight turned to gold. In a moment the door flew up, a small round one, probably six inches in diameter.

His hand went down in the cavity, and drew out a box. Closing the safe he pulled back the mat, and the fire box. The hearth was as undisturbed as it had been before he stepped across it.

"Funny place to have a safe," I remarked.

"Not so funny, Maughan. It's only an emergency safe, and perfectly secure, because it is imbedded in the marble of the hearth." He returned to his chair beside the couch.

I glanced around and my eyes caught the open door back of us.

"Shall I close the door?" I made a move to rise.

"It isn't necessary. I shall be putting the ruby back in a little while." So I sank back and watched him fuss with the case. It opened and he sat for some minutes just looking at the contents. Then, seeming to remember we were there, he glanced up rather startled. I smiled. It was a wonder he had come to himself so soon.

Without a word he handed the case to Margalo who took it eagerly. I was at her side, gazing down at the ruby with her. It was large, much larger than I had imagined, perhaps the size of a small hen's egg. Certainly larger than the proverbial pigeon egg. Nestled in the cotton in which it was packed, it seemed a glowing, living thing.

CO-OPERATIVES?

As a matter of fact, the bill is not favored by liberals.

They believe it really would subsidize inefficiency.

But they do not believe that vast private organizations should be given a monopoly of business at the expense of tens of thousands of individuals.

Liberals believe that publicly owned co-operatives will be the solution.

Mass buying, they agree with big business, is essential in this modern day, to bring down costs to consumers.

SOCIAL SERVICES' COST

The United States has made a modest beginning on social security if one compares it with Great Britain.

Read this from London in the Wall Street Journal:

"No country in the world has such an elaborate system of government social services as Britain."

"Under this head are included poor relief, national health and unemployment insurance, widows' orphans' and old age pensions, education, housing and public health services."

"Their magnitude is best realized by the fact that in 1933, the latest year for which complete statistics are available, their total cost was two billion, four hundred million dollars. That is a sum equal to one-seventh of the total national income of Britain."

THE WAY TO PEACE

Readers may forgive us if we quote once more from the Wall Street Journal, for it contains this illuminating observation (which has escaped most of the world commentators):

"When Germany handed the world her Rhineland jolt, it is to be doubted that either the Reich government or its opponents envisioned an outcome which would be beneficial to all the peoples of the earth. Yet if the proposed peace and economic conference is actually achieved with a full representation of nations, precisely that result may be expected."

"Here is an opportunity which the world seldom has had since the war, perhaps never. The minds of the men of government have shown a recent disposition to realism which is so wholly sane as to be almost unbelievable. If now this changed attitude is to culminate in a free talk in which the real causes of war included economic causes, supplies of raw materials, trade rivalries, colonies, boundaries and tariffs—are to be discussed, the 'inevitability' of war will have been challenged, and the only method of avoiding conflict may be tried."

"For it is only by making an 'adjustment of the peace,' on a basis of the economic reality which the Versailles treaty and Wilsonian self-determination of peoples so completely overlooked, that the world can escape once again hearing the tramp of hob-nailed feet and the roar of great guns, can avoid the complete and perhaps final dislocation of our industrial world as we know it..."

THE CAMDEN RUBY MURDER

By ADAM BLISS
COPYRIGHT—RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Do you Van Every, a collector of rare jewels, invites an acquaintance, Gary Maughan, and the latter's old friend, Margalo Younger, an actress, to his home to view the priceless Camden ruby.

CHAPTER 2

SO SOON, the Chinese servant, was sitting near the safe, a gun on his knees. Van Every had told Margalo and me. I smiled when I thought of him, for his face must be as enigmatic as ever, unsmiling, blank.

"You rather rust Soon with the ruby hunting myself," Van Every had noticed my smile. "I haven't had time to take it down yet. Well—I would have," he hesitated a moment. "I would have, only I wanted to see the thing, hold it. Realize it was mine. You know, Maughan."

I nodded. The recollection of the Khomivar was fresh in my mind. He had played with it several days before he had put it in a deposit box with his collection. I had played with it, too. In fact we sat one whole evening at the villa, looking at the gem and speculating on its history. I was with Van Every when he measured it, weighed it, examined it.

Every large famous gem has a history, but the Camden ruby seemed to top them all. Van Every would know the truth about it, though. Stories of gems fascinated him almost as much as the jewels themselves.

"Rather a grim history back of it," Margalo suggested, as if she wanted Van Every to tell her about it.

"Well—rather, but this is no place to tell it." He looked nervously about. The restaurant was crowded with after-theater people. Waiters were hurrying back and forth from the kitchen, chafing dishes on their trays. He hated restaurants, I knew.

"I would have asked you to my place for something to eat, but Soon is busy."

We left for Van Every's home in a taxi. Margalo was rather silent. She leaned back against the leather cushions, her eyes half closed.

"If you're too tired, we'll drop off at your apartment," I suggested.

"Please, Gary, let me see the ruby. I declare I think you're trying to get rid of me."

"We won't stay long," I promised. "Queer how such a gem happens to be in New York," Margalo remarked.

"Not so queer, Miss Younger, when you know the story."

"Are you sure it's genuine?" Van Every was not offended. He often had been asked just such questions. When I first knew him, I had asked the same about the Khomivar.

"Yes—quite sure. The stone is the finest I've ever seen. Beautiful. But you'll see it for yourself."

Margalo was regarding him curiously as we alighted from the taxi in front of an old brownstone residence on West 74th street. The house was similar to most of the others in the block. A slight, thin, dark-colored steps led from the sidewalk up some dozen feet to the front door, a big oak affair with a modern Yale lock imposed on the wood above the old-fashioned brass one.

I saw Van Every glance quickly at the windows of the second story before he placed his key in the lock. Although the first and third floor windows were dark, a faint light showed on the second. Soon was probably sitting, gun on his knees, guarding his master's treasure.

A switch which Van Every touched just inside the oak door flooded the hall with pale yellow light. It was small, as halls go, and to the right was a narrow stairway. Rush with the wall on one side, while the other was flanked by a carved wood railing. Nothing but a chair and a table in the hall, well chosen they seemed to me, but I could not see clearly because of the dim light which came from an old temple lamp suspended from the ceiling.

We followed Van Every up the thickly carpeted stairs, passed a small Psyche settled languidly in a niche in the wall, and came to the upstairs hall. This was narrow, too. Van Every opened a door near the front and we entered a room, which was very evidently his library. A single light was burning on the table at the far end of the room, and outlined in silhouette was the figure of Soon, sitting on a hard, uncomfortable chair, a heavy automatic on his knees.

He arose immediately when we entered and laid the gun on the table beside the chair.

The Chinese looked at us and nodded slightly when he recognized me. I think now he grunted, too, although I can't be too sure. At any rate I greeted him affably, my eyes wandering quickly about the room.

"That will be all, Soon," Van Every was saying. "I'll want you later, though, so catch a nap." Soon departed silently. I was always sure at the Florence villa that he had padded shoes. Once I had taxed Van Every with it, and he had laughed and said he thought so, too.

Margalo dropped her heavy coat on a chair and removed her hat, a silver turban. I recalled she didn't like hats any too well. In a restaurant, often, at least in the old days, she would pull off her hat and toss it on a chair beside her. I could see she had not changed in this regard.

Her brown hair was heavy, almost too heavy. Thick and wavy; although not curly, and quite long. She had worn it the same for years, in a low, loose knot at the back of her neck. In this shorn-looking age, her abundance of hair seemed unusual. It gave her a mature look—perhaps that was why she appeared older to me. But no, there was something about her face, too, that had changed her. Her skin was as clear as ever, smooth, lovely. Her eyes had the same unfathomable depth but they frightened me a little. I don't know why.

Just now they were closed as she leaned back on the couch where she was sitting. Her long eyelashes cast fluttering shadows on her white cheeks. Her hands were lying in her lap. Margalo's hands were beautiful. Always ringless. On the stage she used her hands to great advantage. Tonight, — Maggie Shand, they had seemed to express her every mood.

Her gown was simple, white, low at the neck, with only tiny braided straps at the shoulders. Her skin against the dress was white, too.

In the dusky room, she seemed out of place. Too white, too pale for it. Van Every stirred the dying coal fire, and a flame shot up the fireplace, casting a flare of red on Margalo's still motionless figure.

I appropriated a chair beside the couch, facing the fire. Comfortable, I thought, as I sank into it. The heat from the coals felt good in the chill, shadowy room.

The fireplace I noted was a fine one, carved from creamy, satin-like marble. Against it to the right was a rack of brass fire implements; to the left, near my foot, a big brass embossed fire box. The couch, on which Margalo sat, the chair which I occupied, and another which I had no doubt Van Every would use were pulled up well to the hearth. Van Every, I knew from old, liked heat and had to have it.

The room stretched on behind us and beyond was a big room lined with bookcases which climbed flush to the ceiling. There were other pieces of furniture in the room, but I didn't notice them particularly then.

Van Every kicked a low footstool my way, and I tucked it under my feet. I thought: I was comfortable before, but now I knew I was doubly comfortable. The chair was pure down, I decided, and hit my back at the exact spot where it should.

The couch Margalo was sitting on was a companion piece, although the back was lower.

"Now, I'll get the ruby," Van Every announced. Margalo's eyes opened and followed him as he stepped in front of us with a murmured apology and swung the brass fire box aside. So that was where his safe was! I had assumed it must be at the far end of the room where Soon had been sitting, the gun on his lap. Under the box was a small mat which our host lifted. Then I saw him, stooping beside me, twist a knob, which the firelight turned to gold. In a moment the door flew up, a small round one, probably six inches in diameter.

His hand went down in the cavity, and drew out a box. Closing the safe he pulled back the mat and the fire box. The hearth was as undisturbed as it had been before he stepped across it.

"Funny place to have a safe," I remarked.

"Not so funny, Maughan. It's only an emergency safe, and perfectly secure, because it is imbedded in the marble of the hearth." He returned to his chair beside the couch.

I glanced around and my eyes caught the open door back of us.

"Shall I close the door?" I made a move to rise.

"It isn't necessary. I shall be putting the ruby back in a little while."

So I sank back and watched him fust with the case. It opened and he sat for some minutes just looking at the contents. Then, seeming to remember we were there, he glanced up rather startled. I smiled. It was a wonder he had come to himself so soon.

Without a word he handed the case to Margalo who took it eagerly. I was at her side, gazing down at the ruby with her. It was large, much larger than I had imagined, perhaps the size of a small hen's egg. Certainly larger than the proverbial pigeon egg. Nestled in the cotton in which it was packed, it seemed a glowing, living thing.

School Carnival Plans Completed For Friday

Affair Arranged by Social Council; Public Invited

All plans are complete for the high school carnival in the school building Friday evening which is being sponsored by the Social Council of the school.

The purpose of the event is to give every student in Cleveland schools an opportunity for some wholesome recreation at a minimum cost. A charge of two cents each has been set for each entertainment.

There will be side shows, a duck pond, a House of Terrors, and a bingo game.

A feature will be a varied program with Paul Weaver as the announcer. Included in this show will be the Boys' Glee club George Rader, H. Ford Adkins, Robert Gussman, Norman Coleman, Janet Funk Mephisto the Talking Horse and many others.

Peanuts, popcorn, and candy are to be sold in the corridors, creating as nearly as possible the atmosphere of the real carnival. The public is invited.

The social council, made up of the presidents and vice presidents of the various school organizations, is in charge of all social functions of the high school and includes Ann Vlerobome, Mary Elizabeth Groce, Ruth Robinson, Harriet Harman, Fred Grant, Ned Harden, Dick Plunk, Richard Harman, William Ammer, Jessie Dresbach, Miss Marian Hitler, Miss Velma Watson, Virgil Cress, and Principal Elmer Reger.

Sewing Club Meets

Mrs. S. B. Orr, E. Mound-st, pleasantly entertained the members of her sewing club at her home Wednesday afternoon.

Twelve members enjoyed the delightful hours spent in sewing and the lunch served at their close.

Miss Phillips Hostess

Miss Alice Phillips, Pinckney-st, entertained with an evening bridge at her home Wednesday. Guests were members of her two table card club.

Favors for high scores when tallies were added went to Miss Hazel Palm and Miss Marguerite Fohl.

A delicious lunch was served later in the evening. Miss Helen Yates invited the club to meet at her home on N. Scioto-st next week.

Concert Date Changed

Local persons will be interested to know that the Women's Choral club of Chillicothe has changed the date of the last of its series of three concerts.

The concert scheduled for April 2 will be presented Thursday evening April 16.

Doris Doe, Metropolitan contractor, who will be the assisting artist, was unable to be present on the date scheduled because of plans of her tour.

The Chillicothe high school auditorium will be the scene of the final concert at 8:15 o'clock.

Aherne on Vallee's Tonight; Fay Also

Original Dramas Planned; Eddie Green, Negro Comic, to Contribute Part of Napoleon in Broadcast

Brian Aherne, Dorothy Thompson, Eddie Green and Frank Fay are stars who will be presented by Rudy Vallee at 8 o'clock entertainment which they will offer includes two original dramas to be done for the first time on the air, a news interview of the European situation, Frank Fay's weekly comedy and songs, and popular tunes by Rudy Vallee and the Connecticut Yankees.

Brian Aherne will play the lead in "The Londonderry Air," a one act play by Rachel Field which has its premiere in this show.
Aherne is now starring with Katharine Cornell on Broadway in "Saint Joan."

The other original dramatic piece features Eddie Green, Negro comic, as Napoleon. It was written by John Tucker Battle who contributed "Jonah and the Whale" to the Vallee Hour several weeks ago. The new sketch is written in the same style as "Jonah" and Eddie Green also played the lead in the episode with the whale.

Dorothy Thompson, in private life the wife of Sinclair Lewis, is a prominent lecturer and journalist in her own right. Familiar with European affairs through her work and travels, she will be interviewed by Rudy on the current situation across the Atlantic.

Chance for Listener

The Eminent Listener whose radio interests may not always coincide with the rest of the living room group who prefer the jazz bands and the puns of the radio comedians to "town hall" and "round table" forums at last may come into his own.

The sudden popularity of the "brain test" program gives the boys and girls with bulging fore-heads and no yen for hotcha tunes and ha-ha dialogue a chance to lord it over the rest of the crowd.

The happy reception of the new
"Answer Me This" and "Have You Heard?" series introduced by WPA and CCC workers through the Educational Radio Project of the United States office of education indicates that we may soon see a rage for this type of program.

In the face of the vast popularity of the crossword puzzle and newspaper and magazine question and answer "departments" it is really surprising that radio hasn't tried out the idea on a large scale before this.

Those preparing the ERP series are to be commended for their intelligent groping of subjects and queries in the tests. Some of the questions, for the average listener, are difficult to answer but there is a sufficient sprinkling of easy-to-answer questions to keep most any listener interested.

TOD THOMPSON SIGNS CONTRACT TO TEACH GOLF

Athens Youth, Assistant to Heeney, to Take Over Duties Early in April

Stanley "Tod" Thompson, assistant to Mike Heeney, popular Athens Country Club golf professional, signed a contract, Wednesday, to take over the professional's duties at the Pickaway Country Club.

Mr. Thompson will begin work early in April.

He comes here with splendid recommendations. He has been engaged in the golfing industry a number of years, starting as a caddy, working his way to caddy master, and then to assistant professional.

He will instruct golfers, start new ones, and later in the season plans a class for winners, children of club members. This should prove popular.

The young professional plays a steady game and has a splendid knowledge of the fine points of the art. He plans a rigid training course for all caddies.

Many golfers, who have been unable to await the start of the season, have been pelted the little ball around the course. The fairways are in splendid condition for this time of the year, and the greens are coming along nicely.

About This And That In Many Sports

DOC FERGUSON SHERMAN DENNY DICK WILLIAMSON

Those three boys are fighters and they would like to find opponents for the Athletic Club's card next Monday evening. All three are fast, hard-hitters and will provide good matches for anyone.

The C. A. C.'s card is for Red Cross benefit.

Three Fights Arranged

Three bouts have been arranged. They will throw in the ring at the same time, Merle Davis and Spike Hill, Shirley Hulce and Jim Arledge, and Alexander and Emerine.

Ferguson for Haft

Doc Ferguson, heavyweight, will be on one of Al Haft's combination boxing-wrestling cards next summer.

Club Cagers to Eat

Athletic Club basketball players will enjoy a banquet Friday evening at the Pickaway Country Club. The season has been a successful one with many new faces seen in the lineup. A balance exists in the treasury so the feed is planned.

Sportsmen About-Face

Pickaway-co sportsmen may do an about-face on their plans to introduce the Chucker partridge into this section.

Ed Rausenberger, treasurer of the League of Ohio Sportsmen, and H. E. Betz, president of the Pickaway Farmer's and Sportsman's association, were given some unpleasant tips on the bird recently when they visited the Urbana game farm.

Foo of Native Bird

They were informed the new partridge is an enemy of the quail and will oust the native bird.

Sportsmen know Pickaway-co farmers would not be satisfied with a bird that would chase out quail and they expect to obtain more information about the newcomer before eggs are purchased.

GIANTS VICTORS, 7-2.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., March 26.—(UP)—The Chicago Cubs hoped to triumph over the New York Giants today and gain an even break in their 6-game series. The Giants won yesterday, 7-2, to take the lead three games to two.

Fielding of Augie Galan, Cubs' centerfielder, has been one of the big features of the series.

LITTLE FOOD, MUCH MONEY

MILWAUKEE, March 26.—(UP)—Fellow workmen pitied Joseph Markiewicz because his dinner pail never contained more than a piece of bread, some raw bacon, or a bit of sausage. After Markiewicz's death it was disclosed in county court he left a $20,000 estate.

Court Meet Attendance Down Third

Townsend Reports 14,055 See Games Compared to 20,688 in 1935

COLUMBUS, March 26.—(UP)—Attendance at the 1936 Ohio scholastic basketball tournament here last week-end showed a decrease of slightly more than 30 per cent from the preceding year.

The official attendance at the 1935 tournament was 20,688 as against 14,055 this season.

The attendance was under a pre-tournament estimate but surprisingly good in view of conditions. Poor weather, failure of a Columbus team to qualify for the first time in 14 years and the lack of a team with the box office appeal of the Waterloo Wonders were all factors that contributed to the decrease.

With the exception of last season however, the draw at the recent tournament was heavier than at any other time in the past 10 years. The high until a year ago was 13,801, established at the 1932 tournament.

H. R. Townsend, commissioner, said the complete financial report of the tournament would not likely be available before next week and it could not be ascertained until then exactly how the meet fared.

In spite of the decrease in receipts Townsend said it was certain the tournament would be able to meet all expenses. He pointed out however, competing teams would not be given a $100,000 as was the case a year ago or would the state association recover anywhere in the neighborhood of the $6,057.29 it received from the 1935 meet.

The expenses of the 32 tournament entrants will be approximately $4,500, Townsend said, in contrast to the $2,200 expense money necessary a year ago when the meet had only 16 competitors.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Introducing actresses to the screen has become so important a part of John Boles' career that the title of "debut man" has been conferred upon him by unanimous consent. He calls himself that, and is rather proud.

His latest, and possibly most important, introduction is on behalf of Gladys Swarthout, the brunette "baby" of the Metropolitan opera, who is playing opposite Boles in her first Paramount musical, "Rose of the Rancho," which comes to the Cliftona theatre Friday and Saturday.

TOD THOMPSON SIGNS CONTRACT TO TEACH GOLF

Athens Youth, Assistant to Heeney, to Take Over Duties Early in April

Stanley "Tod" Thompson, assistant to Mike Heeney, popular Athens Country Club golf professional, signed a contract, Wednesday, to take over the professional's duties at the Pickaway Country Club.

Mr. Thompson will begin work early in April.

He comes here with splendid recommendations. He has been engaged in the golfing industry a number of years, starting as a caddy, working his way to caddy master, and then to assistant professional.

He will instruct golfers, start new ones, and later in the season plans a class for winners, children of club members. This should prove popular.

The young professional plays a steady game and has a splendid knowledge of the fine points of the art. He plans a rigid training course for all caddies.

Many golfers, who have been unable to await the start of the season, have been pelting the little ball around the course. The fairways are in splendid condition for this time of the year, and the greens are coming along nicely.

BUDDY HASSETT COMES TO LIFE; SMACKS FOUR

BARTOW, Fla., March 26.—(UP)—Buddy Hassett, Brooklyn's recruit first baseman, has broken the batting slump which has gripped him since he joined the Dodgers and was hailed again today as one of the best looking young players to come up this season.

Hassett cracked out 4 hits in 4 times at bat yesterday as the Dodgers beat the New York Yankees, 11-9. Until yesterday his batting average was .117.

RUPPERT TO REFUSE TERMS OF HOLDOUTS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 26.—(UP)—Col. Jacob Ruppert said today that the contracts offered Red Ruffing and Ben Chapman, holdouts, are final.

"Unless Ruffing and Chapman accept our terms," said Col. Ruppert, "we'll have to go along without them. There is no basis for compromise or negotiation. I pay my players handsome salaries because I want a contented club. I want no ball players on my club sulking or indifferent to his work because of salary grievances."

EXTENSION OFFICE TO RECEIVE RELIEF GIFTS

CRIMINAL NOTIFIED TO OBTAIN FOOD FOR SUFFERERS

Clothing, Too, May Be Left for Distribution in Stricken Regions

Another means through which Circleville and Pickaway-co residents can assist relief workers in caring for flood sufferers was provided Thursday. T. D. Krinn, administrator of the Pickaway-co Division of Aid for the Aged, received a notice that his office is to receive food and clothing donations.

The highway department will take charge of donations under direction of the Red Cross. The notice sent Mr. Krinn follows:

"Governor Davey has issued an appeal to the public for food and clothing for flood sufferers. The Governor requests donations be sent, left or delivered to the Division of Aid headquarters in each county. The highway department will take charge of donations under direction of the Red Cross. You are urged to cooperate with the governor's appeal by extending every assistance possible."

It is signed by T. M. Lamoreaux, manager of the Columbus Old Age Pension office.

The Circleville office is in the Johnson building, S. Court-st., opposite the city building.

YOUTHFUL HITCH-HIKER ATTACKS HIGHWAY CHIEF

Richard Bivens, 19, of Portsmouth, was given a suspended sentence of 30 days in the county jail Thursday by H. O. Eveland, justice of peace, for throwing stones at the automobile of Charles Mowery, state highway department superintendent, causing damage of $3.

The youth was arrested by deputy sheriffs four miles north of the city on Route 23, Wednesday afternoon. He was hitch-hiking. His action almost caused Mr. Mowery to collide with another car. When Mr. Mowery stopped the youth attacked him.

Bivens left his home Tuesday. He had been in ill health. He was released to relatives.

Hindenburg, LZ-129, Returns to Base for Repairs

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, March 26.—(UP)—Germany's giant new Zeppelin Hindenburg—LZ 129—was damaged at the stern today when it took off in a strong northeast wind on an election propaganda tour with the Graf Zeppelin.

It was announced that the damage was slight and both ships continued on their cruise. But three hours later the Hindenburg landed for repairs. It was planned to restart the ship within a few hours.

For the first time the new ship bore its name, "Hindenburg," painted on both sides of the envelope. It and the Graf Zeppelin were expected to land Sunday evening, after passengers and crew had cast their votes on board in the Reichstag election.

The Hindenburg is to start for Lakehurst, N. J., May 6, on a one-week round trip flight.

KRINN NOTIFIED TO OBTAIN FOOD FOR SUFFERERS

Clothing, Too, May Be Left for Distribution in Stricken Regions

Another means through which Circleville and Pickaway-co residents can assist relief workers in caring for flood sufferers was provided Thursday. T. D. Krinn, administrator of the Pickaway-co Division of Aid for the Aged, received a notice that his office is to receive food and clothing donations.

The highway department will take charge of donations under direction of the Red Cross. The notice sent Mr. Krinn follows:

"Governor Davey has issued an appeal to the public for food and clothing for flood sufferers. The Governor requests donations be sent, left or delivered to the Division of Aid headquarters in each county. The highway department will take charge of donations under direction of the Red Cross. You are urged to cooperate with the governor's appeal by extending every assistance possible."

It is signed by T. M. Lamoreaux, manager of the Columbus Old Age Pension office.

The Circleville office is in the Johnson building, S. Court-st., opposite the city building.

Mainly About People

ONE MINUTE PULIT
Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart: so doth the sweetness of a man's friend by hearty counsel.—Proverbs 27:9.

Traffic into Chillicothe was being detoured off Route 23 Thursday over Route 104 and the Kellenberger road. A new bituminous mat is being placed on the Bridge-st bridge floor.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Valentine, East Ringgold, announce the birth of a daughter in Berger hospital Wednesday night.

Charles Plum, senior at Ohio State university, Columbus, returned Wednesday from New York City where he spent the last three months. He was employed by the Lybrand Ross Brothers and Montgomery, a public accounting firm. He is spending the remainder of the spring vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Plum, N. Court-st.

L. L. Henninger of Chillicothe, chief of district No. 11 under the WPA program, has received a note of appreciation for the work he and his employees did during the floods. The note was sent by Dr. Carl Watson, Ohio WPA administrator.

YOUTHFUL HITCH-HIKER ATTACKS HIGHWAY CHIEF

Richard Bivens, 19, of Portsmouth, was given a suspended sentence of 30 days in the county jail Thursday by H. O. Eveland, justice of peace, for throwing stones at the automobile of Charles Mowery, state highway department superintendent, causing damage of $3.

The youth was arrested by deputy sheriffs four miles north of the city on Route 23, Wednesday afternoon. He was hitch-hiking. His action almost caused Mr. Mowery to collide with another car. When Mr. Mowery stopped the youth attacked him.

Bivens left his home Tuesday. He had been in ill health. He was released to relatives.

WIND DAMAGES HUGE ZEPPELIN

Hindenburg, LZ-129, Returns to Base for Repairs

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, March 26.—(UP)—Germany's giant new Zeppelin Hindenburg—LZ 129—was damaged at the stern today when it took off in a strong northeast wind on an election propaganda tour with the Graf Zeppelin.

It was announced that the damage was slight and both ships continued on their cruise. But three hours later the Hindenburg landed for repairs. It was planned to restart the ship within a few hours.

For the first time the new ship bore its name, "Hindenburg," painted on both sides of the envelope. It and the Graf Zeppelin were expected to land Sunday evening, after passengers and crew had cast their votes on board in the Reichstag election.

The Hindenburg is to start for Lakehurst, N. J., May 6, on a one-week round trip flight.

UNDERWOOD IN CAPITAL, SOON TO ASSUME BENCH

Congressman Mel G. Underwood is in Washington, D. C. and will return to Columbus before April 4 to be sworn in as U. S. judge for the southern district of Ohio.

He is expected to present his resignation as a member of Congress before the end of the week. Judge Underwood will assume the bench with one of the heaviest dockets in many years as no actions have been tried, except emergency cases, since the death of Judge Benson W. Hough.

HAL PHILLIPS, LANCASTER NEWSPAPER VETERAN, DIES

LANCASTER, March 26.—Hal V. Phillips, 62, veteran city editor of the Daily Eagle, died in Grant hospital, Columbus, Wednesday, after a two-months' illness.

Mr. Phillips had been in the newspaper business 32 years. He joined the Daily Eagle staff first as a compositor, later becoming foreman of the job printing department. He became city editor in 1924 and retained the position until his death.

Love may be blind, as Shakespeare said, but it is not shortsighted.
